

Cory Hartley

'A Different Summer'

I wrote this poem during lockdown,
the year is 2020.

I've been a busy little bumblebee,
and discovered bugs a plenty.

In my garden I used my spade,
to go digging in the soil,
I held a worm in my hands,
and he began to coil.

I ventured on a little mole,
I couldn't believe my eyes,
The fields were alive and full of life,
with beautiful dragonflies.

I walked into the woods,
to see what I could see,
and there I discovered a shield bug,
camouflaged on a tree.

I peered up further, I looked up high,
then I noticed a line of ants marching by.

Lockdown isn't so bad after all,
I've been doing things I shouldn't have done,

If your feeling down,
 turn that ^{your} ~~your~~ ^{inside} ~~inside~~ down,
 and get outside and have some fun!

By Corey Hartley, aged 7

